ASPRS-Potomac Region Technical Tour US Army Geospatial Center

The next ASPRS-Potomac Region Tech Tour will be held on Monday, January 25, 2011, from 10 AM to 1 PM, at the US Army Geospatial Center in Alexandria, VA.

The Army Geospatial Center, formerly the Topographical Engineering Center, is part of the US Army Corp of Engineers and is located within the Humphreys Engineering Center adjacent to Fort Belvoir. The AGC has long been a center of research and development into geospatial data collection, processing, exploitation and dissemination in support of both civilian missions and missions of US ground forces.

The AGC has played a leadership role in multiple Department of Defense research and development activities focused on terrain challenges, including the Rapid Terrain Visualization (RTV) and Urban Record (UR) Advanced Concept Technology Demonstrations (ACTDs). The Buckeye program grew out of these efforts, which brings the collection of high resolution color imagery and LIDAR data to the battlefield. The Buckeye program was recognized as a 2006 Army Greatest Invention of the Year. For more information on AGC, visit http://www.agc.army.mil/
